Hongkona, April 14th, 1884.

THE correspondence laid on the Counc table on Wednesday last in reference to the extension of the Prava along the sea face of the naval and military establishments shows that His Excellency the Governor has taken up this question with characteristic energy. Hongkong is fortunate in-securing-a-Goto use his undoubted influence in support of any scheme or movement for the benefit Mercury. of the colony. We have seen how success! attended bis efforts to secure a measure of popular representation in the apthe reconstituted Legislative Council, and since then another proof of the attention. given to his despatches at the Colonial Office has been afforded by the consent wrung from the Secretary of State to the appointment of to have forged a bank order to provide the cash cutive Council. Other measures proposed and dismissal from the service.—Courier. by His Excellency are also receiving consideration at home, and it is not too much to sanctioned and carried through during Sir ways have been lions in the path in connection with this much desired improvement. Either the Admiralty or the War Office, and sometimes both, have objected and raised terms both with the Admiral and the General, and there is consequently little likelihood of any friction between the civil, naval, and military authorities during the present administration.

Some of the preliminary difficulties in the way of bringing about the Praya extension have been surmounted, but a new one appears to have been reised by Vice-Admiral WILLES. The cost of the work of reclamation and bunding is es timated at £45,000, of which amount Sir GEORGE BOWEN proposed that the Colony should contribute two-thirds, and the Imperial Government the other third. The Colony will gain nothing but the new thoroughfare and all the advantages which a continuous praya will afford in connecting the eastern and western portions of the town and in relieving the pressure of the traffic in | whom the Covernment privately offered the posi-Queen's Road. The Military Authorities, on the other hand, would acquire no less dor in his stoad. It is quite certain, at all events, than five acres of land, which certainly that Korea will be represented in Paking, and is a good consideration for what they footing of equality. Jiji Shimpo. would give up and contribute; while the Naval Yard would be increased by a quarter of an acre, and a basin three-quarters of an acre in size would be constructed for the use of the Navy. But Admiral WILLES was seem ingly not satisfied with this arrangement : he apparently thought that the advantages to be derived from the project were not commensurate with the sacrifice involved in the surrender of the foreshore in front of the Naval Yard. He accordingly advanced a claim to the Royal Artillery Barracks to incorporate with the naval establishment. This claim is, and, we are bound to say, very naturally, resisted by the Military Authorities, who are already so short of accommodation that they have to rent a building at some distance from the other barracks. No doubt the Naval Authorities could do with more space, but it is hardly to be expected the Military will give up so large and important a range of buildings as the Artillery Barracks, though its possession would make the Naval establishment compact and convenient. It is of course most desirable that stated to have weighed so many picula, to have all through the summer, and he recommended all parties should get fair play, and every effort is being made, we doubt not, to that fident, too, that General SARGENT will lend his best efforts to promote an early settlement of this important question. Admiral Sir WILLIAM DOWNLL has hardly had time to concede what is possible and reasonable. Could not a somewhat more extensive reclamation be made, and a larger slice of land thus be secured for the Naval Authorities? The obstacle to this proposal would probably be found in the depth of

In June or July, 1879, on the the duty but the earnest wish and pleasure of the occasion of a second insurrection, Haronn was incoming Committee of the Chamber to bring killed and his band dispersed. The hopes of the dynasty therefore concentrated in the persons of the captives at Cairo. The conquest of Darfour had in the first place been easy, because the Arab tribes, anxious for the preservation of the slave-trade, had held aloof from the Sultan during his despairing resistance; but during the subsequent revolts the chief danger arose from these Arabs, who were alarmed by Zebehr's overthrow, who dreaded in anticipation the cossition of the trade in slaves. General Gordon's "Letters from Central Africa" there are many interesting passages about the people of Darfour, whose misfortunes elicited his deepest commiseration, in contradistinction to his hatred of the "cowardly, cruel, and effete Arab" and "the rapacious Bashi-Bazouk" irregulars of the Khedivo. The popular antipathy to the Turk was so intense among them that a story was told to the effect that during one of the rebellions a woman who had lived with an Egyptian officer took their child to the leader her own people and requested him to kill it as "the son of a Turk," which he at once did. During these risings the saffering of the people from starvation and smallpox was almost incredible, and defied description. It was then that the Governor-General termed General Gordon's rule the Fors, or negro population, used to vary their ordinary occupations by attacking caravans, but the greater numbers of the people had suffered too much at the hands of their Egyptian oppressors to have much heart left for these adventures.
